

General Briefing D2 in the Shadow of Regional Transformations and External Movement Relations

The good ones among us are the ones who betray us

This briefing reviews the movement's orientations and foreign relations in light of regional developments and the state of acute polarization in the world.

Dear Mujahideen brothers, in light of the radical alignments and transformations that the region is witnessing, aiming to make the occupation the center of superiority in the region, prolonging its life and increasing its chances of dominance, which negatively affects the course of the conflict with the Zionist enemy, exposes the cause to more threats, and affects the movement's position and regional presence. This has actually happened, as these alignments have affected the movement's presence in a group of countries in the region - which is one of the roles played by regional powers under the direction and incitement of the Zionist enemy. In light of all this, it has become the duty of the movement to reposition itself to protect the project of jihad and resistance and to preserve the continuity of the Palestinian cause in the face of the broad wave of normalization by Arab countries, which aims primarily to liquidate the Palestinian cause and confront the project of -

Despite the internal threats, internal divisions and political fragmentation that the Zionist enemy is suffering from, it is still developing its foreign relations with Arab and Islamic countries, and has begun to show off the level and extent of its penetration into the Arab and Islamic region in light of its efforts,

To be a natural entity that is integrated and even dominant in the region. Accordingly, it is the duty of the movement to confront this penetration and this real threat.

For the Palestinian cause in particular and for the nation in general, through the formation of fronts from the components of the Islamic and Arab nation, and the intensification and coordination of efforts to emerge from the state of internal fighting and grinding that the region is experiencing, which is being fueled by the West and the occupation, and the restoration of consideration for the Palestinian cause and its centrality and sanctity among the peoples and sons of the nation, and the redefinition of the occupation as the first, common and sole enemy.

Brothers, Mujahideen, in light of these regional and international changes, it is the duty of the time and the necessity of rationality and wisdom to address...

Towards building a network of regional and international security relations, and developing the movement's external relations on the basis of strengthening the project of jihad and resistance.

And positioning in the arenas that contributed to that, and getting closer to all components of our Palestinian people in the diaspora, especially in the surrounding countries that must have a pivotal and major role in confronting the enemy on the path to liberation and return and fulfilling God's inevitable promise to destroy the state.

Jews. And within this path

The movement has intensified its presence in Lebanon, where there is military and intelligence coordination with Hezbollah and closer rapprochement with the Palestinian factions and forces in the diaspora. At the same time, the movement is striving to form a unified Palestinian national front that will protect the issue from the settlement team and mobilize efforts for the project of return and liberation.

Visiting some important Arab countries recently, such as Algeria, which began to reactivate its influence in the regional scene, fearing the risks of normalization on its security and vital interests. These countries realized the importance of the relationship with the movement, whose influence increased after the Battle of Saif al-Quds in the local and regional scene to confront the expected threats of normalization.

Raising the level of relations with the Islamic Republic of Iran on the basis of confronting the enemy and strengthening the project of jihad and resistance, as the relationship with it was established within the movement's strategy aimed at motivating the Islamic nation with all its components to play its role.

And to carry out its duty towards Palestine, as well as within the framework of Iran's declared and shared literature and policies with the movement in confronting and ending

The Zionist entity, and not on the principle of compulsion and coercion, since Iranian financial support is almost the only (official) and announced source for the movement, it is considered a strategic relationship according to the interests desired from it and resulting from it, especially in light of the wave

Extensive normalization and declared alliances with the enemy that seeks to undermine the movement's relationship with Iran, realizing the extent of its danger to its existence and continuity

Dear Mujahideen Brothers: The movement manages its foreign political relations according to general principles and starting points, starting with emphasizing that Hamas is a Palestinian national liberation movement whose intellectual reference is Islam, from which it draws its positions and policies in managing the conflict with the occupation, then working on the basis of the unity of the nation with all its components, its cohesion, and the unity of the Arab and Islamic ranks. The movement does not object to establishing relations with all countries and political entities, and that the rupture should only be with the occupying state as a single exception in its capacity as the central enemy of the nation, while always being keen not to interfere in the internal affairs of these countries. These are rules determined by the movement's political literature, which has allowed it to have general political openness to everyone, and to establish relations with many Arab and international regimes, regardless of their intellectual and political backgrounds, and to overcome internal Arab crises of the magnitude that Syria has experienced. The movement works to benefit from this role in enabling the efforts of the unity of the nation and all forms of cooperation and coordination, in a way that serves the Palestinian cause, and from that it sets out to support the formation of alliances and axes that oppose the Zionist project and its agents and tools in the region, at the forefront of these axes is the "Jerusalem Axis."

The movement's foreign relations are a political matter governed by the legitimate policy that takes into account the attainment of interests, the prevention of corruption, and the requirements of the stage, and is not subject to emotional calculations and dreams, especially in light of the media deception, political and social uproar, and confusion of concepts, which are directed by some hostile parties that work to strike the political and social awareness of the resistance supporters and its sons within well-studied plans, these plans that fail every time, and the sons of the movement always prove the extent of their political awareness and their understanding of the movement's positions within the framework of the structural solidity that they enjoyed, and within the framework of not building on a sectarian and religious basis that was never part of the movement's literature; and was not a determinant of the movement's foreign relations. Despite the intellectual and ideological differences, the movement enjoyed a strategic relationship with Syria, given that it is one of the main surrounding countries that did not normalize relations with the occupation, and one of the capitals of the Palestinian diaspora that carries the spirit of resistance. It actually formed a strategic location and a political, military and organizational base that provided a lot to the movement and to the project of jihad and resistance, which had a clear impact on our conflict with the Zionist enemy, which sought day and night to end the movement's presence there, and worked to exhaust and drain Syria and remove it from the circle of action and influence in the regional scene.

Finally, dear Mujahid brothers

The movement faces great challenges and a great responsibility represented in strengthening and accumulating its strength to continue the project of jihad and resistance, and its internal and external entitlements and requirements, which it seeks with all its strength to meet, based on the awareness and understanding of its mujahideen and sons and their confidence in their leadership and the decision-making system within their mujahid movement to strive to restore all of the movement's external relations that the enemy has disrupted or is trying to disrupt, and

These requirements include restoring the relationship with Syria and compensating for what the resistance project lost after leaving it, developing the relationship with all components of the Jerusalem axis and the resistance, the peoples of the Arab and Islamic nation, and the free people of the world, and reducing the area of influence and impact of the enemy, without scratching the relations of the other movement and without being affected and following the programs and agendas of the Western alliances and what serves them in the region.

And God has intended the path
